Army Corps of Engineers gearing up for mosquito season

The US Army Corps of Engineers (Corps) is gearing up in preparation for mosquito season at the Craney Island Dredged Material Management Area (CIDMMA).

Much time and effort has gone in to reducing mosquito breeding ground on CIDMMA, just one of the ongoing initiatives to reduce the population. A letter was sent out to residents near Craney Island outlining the Corps' plan to reduce and control the mosquito population and the same info will be presented at the upcoming Churchland Civic League meeting on April 27, 2005.

Attached is a copy of the letter sent to residents with detailed information about what the Corps is doing to control the mosquito population this season.
